People's Vigilance Committee on Human Rights (PVCHR), a program unit of Jan Mitra Nyas works to ensure basic rights for marginalized groups in the Indian society, e.g. children, women, Dalits and tribes and to create a human rights culture based on democratic values. PVCHR ideology is inspired by the father of the Dalit movement, Dr. B. R. Ambedkar, who struggled against Brahmanism and the caste hierarchical system prevailing in India.

Three comprehensive programs always integrate the combination of service delivery and advocacy in its program components: (Comprehensive program for survivors of torture and Organized Violence, Comprehensive program for model villages and model blocks, Comprehensive program for women and children sectors)

In 2004 PVCHR created first "people Friendly Village" to enable and amplify the voice of the marginalized. Since then organization had implemented projects on child rights issues with support from CRY (Child Right and You), Sir Dorabji Tata Trust (India) and Global Fund for Children (USA). Dr. Lenin founder of the organization was founding member of Bachapan Bachao Andolan (Save the Child hood Movement) along with Mr. Kailash Satyarthi and others. He organized, coordinated, and participated as Core Marcher in Global March against Child Labour. Initiated the Fair Play Campaign against use of child labour in Indian Sporting Goods Industry and The campaign influenced FIFA, ICC (International Cricket Council), World Federation of Sporting Goods Industry and Reebok to prohibit use of child labour in producing their goods. JMN/PVCHR is a vibrant partner of alliance working on child issues at state, regional, national and international level.

Now PVCHR is working in 21 villages and 1 slum of Varanasi to ensure the civil, political, social, economic and cultural rights of every child as mentioned in four categories of UNCRC i.e. Right to survival, Right to Development, and Right to Protection of children through (1) Direct activity with children (2) Action with community (3) Direct action with local self – governance (4) Networking and policy advocacy, which is creating child right grid model. (5) Facilitate effective implementation of other legislations for child protection in the Model village.

Organization believes that Education will break the cycle of poverty, improve equity, empower women, and create health awareness and moreover improved democracy and accountability. So, in 2006 with the support of Sir Dorabji Tata Trust runs Pre-Primary Center in Ayer and Bhaithauli for the first learners. In 2007 Ms. Helma Ritscher, Chairperson, Indo- German Society of Remscheid visited Ayer village and together with the community and PVCHR core group and core – team decided to build room in musahar ghetto with economic assistance from Inwent, Germany through DIG. Understanding the importance of education Mr. Sijjan and Somaru Musahar donated the land to build the pre- primary centre with the kitchen. On 6th September, 2007 Ms. Veena, District Magistrate of Varanasi and Mr. Kim, Director-Trustee of May 18 Foundation and participants of 4th May 18 Academy of South Korea inaugurate this Eklavya centre.

Comprehensive program for survivors of torture and Organized Violence

PVCHR since its inception is working to establish rule of law through participatory activism. In 2010 the organization adopted 60 model villages for creating torture free model village. The role of village life in the Indian culture and history is almost sacred. Hence, the construct of the model village strategy is a key to public discourse on mechanisms of state sponsored violence and suppression and keeping poor neighborhoods excluded from the development process taking place elsewhere in India. 'Model Village' is pursuing progress in 60-70 villages as part of the preventive campaign 'torture free villages'.

Musician Against Torture: organized on 28th November, 2014 in Hotel Kamesh Hut, Varanasi in memory of Justice Shri Rangnath Mishra (former Chairperson of NHRC, Former Chief Justice of India and member of advisory committee at

Detention Watch:

In April, 2011 PVCHR[i] in consultation with member organization of NATT[ii] officially launched detention watch to monitor any type of detention happening with the adult and children in Judicial Custody, Police Custody, Custody in Remand Home and Administrative Custody to strengthen and expansion of its previous work of PVCHR for focusing on rights of prisoners and rights during the times of detention.

The strategy of the detention watch based on 1. Policy to practice and 2. Practice to Policy. Article 21 of the Constitution guarantees the right of personal liberty and thereby prohibits any inhuman, cruel or degrading treatment to any person whether (s) he is a national or foreigner. Already many guidelines and direction from time to time were given by Hon'ble Supreme Court and High Court of various state courts for the well – being of prisoners and rights during detentions.[iii]

The strategic actions are as follows which is based on previous experience:

1. Court Intervention: Public Interest Litigation (PIL)[iv] and writ petition
2. Meta- Legal Intervention: With various concerned authorities and National Human Rights Commission, New Delhi.
3. Rehabilitation of the acquitted prisoners.
4. Policy level intervention for prison reform, advocating for the implementation of various recommendations by the committee and intervention on the trial procedures.
5. Monitoring the prison and homes through using of Right to Information Act – to know actual knowledge condition of the prisons.
6. Visit to juvenile home and visit to correction home for women in collaboration with QIC-AC network.

7. Tracking the cases of custodial death, torture in police custody, administrative custody and homes through various site alerts.

- NHRC on the about the discrimination main reason behind high number of Muslims in prisons (given below petition) on the complaint NHRC gave direction to Ministry of Home Affair to take appropriate action. Ministry of Home Affairs wrote Chief Secretary for taking further appropriate action.

In 2001 PVCHR started using information technology for torture prevention advocacy with a news title “Women paraded naked in Karnataka” According to the news reporting she belongs to the scheduled caste and resides in Onenur village in Bellary district of Andra Pradesh. The men were angry of their community, who had eloped with a dalit boy last month, returned to the village and blamed the woman for instigating her. On the complaint NHRC took cognizance and called for the report from concerned authorities.

In 2005 PVCHR started its blogger www.pvchr.blogspot.com when hardly organization in India was using new technology for torture prevention and advocacy. PVCHR is using communication tools and media to reach out to the widest coverage of public and stakeholders – in a cost effective manner - for torture prevention and advocacy.

The motive behind using IT for torture prevention advocacy as follows:

- Web as the infrastructure for storing and dissemination of institutional memories and custom references and used with the objective to transform private pain into political voice.
- To create a closer, more intimate network of individuals & organizations. To provide an opportunity to participate in debates on various activities & raise key issues.
- To share information with intention to enrich each other on activities and also on testimonial therapy.
- To reach out with the survivors suffering to the UN, allied human rights organizations, policy makers, academicians and Civil Society at large PVCHR used online social media as a cost –effective medium for the monitoring the cases of human rights violation across India through google alert on various thematic issues and following daily newspaper on many sources i.e. facebook, twitter and etc.

The complaint to the concerned authorities is done through email. Within 24 hours organization received email confirmation from office of Director General of Police and comment from various concerned authorities on the investigation report. Even the office of Chief Minister of Uttar Pradesh sent the message of the action taken in concerned cases.
